Attendants Announced for Brown-Bradley Wedding.

MR. AND MRS. BELMONT'S PLANS

They Will Spend a Few Weeks in New York Before Opening Their House Here—Secretary of State and Mrs. Root Attended Theater—Mr. and Mrs. Charles Carroll to Go to Paris.

The wedding party to attend Miss Anna Brown and Mr. Charles H. Bradley, at St. Margaret's Church, on Thursday afternoon, in addition to the bridesmaids present some time ago, will include Mr. Hugh L. Wilson and Mr. Marshall F. Mills, of New York, former room mates of the bridegroom; Princeton; Mr. H. Williamson Peil, also of New York; Mr. Graham H. Poe, of Baltimore; Mr. W. A. Steinhilber and Mr. William A. Robinson, both of Pittsburgh; Mr. S. Duncan Bradley and Mr. Edward C. Heald, both of Washington; Mr. Sevelon Brown, Jr., of Chicago; Mr. George L. Huntress, of Boston, and Lieut. Victor Huston, U. S. N., who will serve as ushers. Mr. Andrew Bradley, the bridegroom's brother, will be best man. Mr. Phelps Brown will give his sister away.

Mrs. Bradley, mother of the bridegroom, will give a supper party for the young people directly interested to-morrow evening.

The wedding day for Miss Marie Barnes and Lieut. Mark Brooke, U. S. A., whose engagement was announced yesterday, will be Wednesday, December 12, the ceremony to take place at St. John's Church, Lafayette square, with the men of the bride party all brother officers of the bridegroom, and consequently in uniform. A small reception will follow at the bride's home, on Twentieth street.

Lieut. Brooke, who belongs to the engineers on duty at the Washington Barracks, is now detailed in Cuba, where he expects to return with his bride immediately after their marriage. He is a son of Maj. John Brooke, and member of a prominent Philadelphia family of that name, and was graduated from West Point in the class of 1882.

Wednesday, December 12, has also been selected for the marriage of Miss Elmer Morton Hoyt and Mr. Philip Heiborn, Jr., which, as already announced, will be a home ceremony.

The short and interesting meeting of the United Hunt Association came to a close yesterday, to the great regret of the sport-loving portion of society, which found its way to the Benning club house for the afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Perry Belmont, the former president of the association, did not open their house for the meeting, as they were passing some weeks at their New York home before coming to Washington to remain during the winter. Mr. and Mrs. Belmont during their stay had an apartment at the New Willard.

Mrs. Root has returned from New York, and with the Secretary of State occupied a box at the Belasco Theater last evening. The German Ambassador and Baroness von Sternburg, the Japanese Ambassador and Viscountess Aoki, the Belgian minister and Baroness Moncheur, all entertained friends at the same theater.

An engagement of great interest to society, and especially of the traveled branch, is that of Mrs. Daniel Cox, of Philadelphia, and Count di Brazza di Savorgnan, which has just been announced from Rome.

Mrs. Cox is the widow of Daniel Cox, and Count di Brazza di Savorgnan is an Italian nobleman, and a brother of Count Pierre Paul Francesco Camilli di Brazza di Savorgnan, the African explorer. Mrs. Cox has lived abroad for a number of years, spending her winters in Rome, where she met the count.

Col. and Mrs. Valentine McNally, who have been passing the last four weeks at Atlantic City, are now in New York for a week's visit before returning to town. They will pass the winter at the Hamilton.

Mr. William Rummel, eldest of the three talented sons of Mrs. Franz Rummel, of this city, has returned from a prolonged stay in Europe, where he has been studying the violin under Ysaye and other famous masters. Mr. Rummel is also well known as a nephew of Mr. Edward Lind Morse, whose musical evenings have been such an interesting feature of recent seasons.

Mr. and Mrs. Morse have announced their intention to spend the winter in Stockbridge, Mass., to the regret of many Washington friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Carroll will pass the winter in Paris, where they have leased the former home of the Duke and Duchess de Bisaccia. Mrs. Carroll, who has been passing a month in Italy, has returned to Paris to direct the refurbishing of her new house.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Franc were at home on Sunday afternoon to a large number of visitors, who came to congratulate the host on his seventieth birthday. Assisting in dispensing the hospitality of the afternoon were Mrs. Harry Franc and Mrs. J. W. Nordlinger. Mrs. Henry Franc was dressed in black lace over black silk. Mrs. Harry Franc wore a white lace robe, and Mrs. Nordlinger a white cloth costume. Mr. and Mrs. Franc entertained many guests during the afternoon and evening.

Miss Jack Bradley was the guest of honor at a luncheon given by Mrs. Thomas K. O'Brien Saturday. Others present were Miss Eloise Lee, of New York; Mrs. Edwin Bailey, of this city; Mr. Percy Jones, of Ohio, and Mr. William Glenn, of the University of Virginia.

MISS SARTORIS A BRIDE.

Gen. Grant's Granddaughter Becomes Mrs. George Woolston.
New York, Oct. 23.—Miss Rosemary Sartoris, younger daughter of Mrs. Nellie Grant Sartoris and granddaughter of Gen. U. S. Grant, was married to George H. Woolston at noon to-day in Calvary Episcopal Church. Rev. Turner, assistant rector, performed the ceremony. The wedding was attended only by Mrs. Sartoris, Mr. Jones, of Chicago, an intimate friend of the family, who gave the bride away; Woodruff Sutton, and Owen Brainard, friends of the bridegroom. That the wedding was a quiet one was due to the

OPENING NIGHT AT THEATERS

Miss Hilda Spong and W. F. Hawtrey in "John Hudson's Wife."

A large audience that contained many people distinguished in official and social life witnessed at the Belasco Theater last night, an unusually striking performance by Miss Hilda Spong, Mr. William F. Hawtrey, and a competent supporting company of the English play, "John Hudson's Wife." Miss Spong is an actress of fine quality, with great emotional power, which she used with admirable restraint. She has an impressive presence and a personality that commands confidence and admiration from the outset, and as the play progressed last night she grew steadily in the favor of her audience. Her work is simple, sincere, and clear-cut, and in a trying part there was no false note throughout. Somewhat painful as the story is, and not unmarked by crudities in development, really good work by all participants in the presentation carried it through with steadily increasing interest to the effecting denouement. This was led up to by a scene of mingled comedy, contributed by Mr. Hawtrey as the debauched father of the heroine, and almost poignant emotional strain, in which Miss Spong as the purchased wife awakened at last to love and a full sense of duty, displayed the full measure of her art and power. This scene, on which the curtain falls, removed whatever had hitherto might have been left from the earlier revelations of sordid bargaining and degraded aristocracy.

The story of the play, as already known to most of our readers, is of the noble and unselfish daughter of an impoverished family of English gentry who marries a very rich plebeian she does not love, and who knows she is the curtain falls, removed whatever had hitherto might have been left from the earlier revelations of sordid bargaining and degraded aristocracy.

The unenviable character of the husband is reasonably well played by Herbert Percy, an actor of good presence and conscientiousness, whose manner is, however, marked by unnecessary acidity and coldness. Mr. Hawtrey, in the role of the worthless, but somewhat amusing, father of the heroine, was very good throughout. Mr. Lionel Walsh, as his even more worthless and unlovely, and detestable son, was capital. Mr. Charles Rowan, in the part of Lord Seaton, was very satisfactory, crude as were some of the scenes in which he was the dominating figure.

Miss Lella Repton, as Lady Beauchamp; Miss Florence Howard, as Janet, the maid; Miss Bern, as the hero's mother, and Henry Hanscombe, as his father, rendered their parts competently. In short, the entire company is satisfactory, and the performance, as a whole, is not open to serious criticism.

At the end of the second act the curtain was raised three times in response to the applause, and a magnificent basket of flowers, in keeping with what might be expected of such a combination of authorship and acting. The actor has, so long been associated with musical comedy that this essay into straight comedy was looked forward to with some curiosity, much confidence, and many well wishes. It is safe to say that no one was other than perfectly satisfied with the venture.

Richard Harding Davis in his latest effort has carried his public into new fields; he has placed his up-to-date American hero in the midst of the Graco-Turkish struggle of 187, and, taking advantage of the temptations presented by a setting so suggestive of opera bouffe, has brought to the stage a play of such a nature as was never intended to be taken by American audiences otherwise than mock-seriously.

"The Gallipoli" is full of swift action, dramatic situations, quiet, tense, honest play, and even has pulse-quicken dramatic moments, which lift it from the level of the average farce-comedy. The merit lies in its smoothness and its logically developed story, which, in spite of its very daring absurdity, possesses a tinge of probability and a picturesque underlying sentiment. The doings of breezy, bustling American characters in an atmosphere of Eastern sluggishness and misunderstanding furnish the excuse for a very pleasant and amusing evening's entertainment.

The bare statement that Mr. Hitchcock has a role in which he is seen at his best, and in which he has done his best, is not enough to attract the attention of the audience. The creator of Bob Clay and Van Bibber knows better than to leave his audience in the dark, and he has not failed to tell them, in a plain, pleasure and excitement telling, idiosyncratic, unassuming style of humor, with his flashes of good sense, and his splendidly for the part.

The supporting company is a notable one. Edgar L. Davenport, as Kirk Warren, the real war correspondent, while having his line to stand out prominently in a role calling for much pent-up emotion. Herbert Corbell was inimitable as a plain newspaper man, who refuses to be known as a "war correspondent." Alexander Kearney, as Capt. O'Malley, and Herbert Cawthorne, as Mr. Griggs, furnished good foils for the star's fun-making. Mr. Corbell's appearance in the last act as a Turkish colonel was a masterpiece of make-up, and was well acted. George Lawrence, who was remembered for her achievement as the hair-dresser in "Her Own Way," was appropriately cast as the optimistic "human fly," and made every line that she was entrusted with a telling one. Pauline Anthony, as Grace Whitney, gave a charming portrayal of a sweet, ingenious American girl, who wins the love of "The Gallipoli," and Susie Forrester-Cawthorne, as the Turkish colonel's daughter, was a masterpiece of make-up, and was well acted.

Several handsome stage settings have been provided for "The Gallipoli," and the handling of the elements shows a careful and intelligent stage management. The audience, which filled every portion of the theater, would not be satisfied until Mr. Hitchcock made a droll speech of thanks.

"The Arrival of Kitty" Pleases Audiences at the Majestic.

"The Arrival of Kitty," a merry farce of the mistaken identity type, made its appearance yesterday and last night before enthusiastic audiences at the Majestic. The farce would be of the ordinary type were it not for the introduction of a female impersonation, cleverly done, by Mr. Hal Johnson, who brought down the house with his exaggerated femininity. A number of songs were interpolated during the action. "He Walked Right In and Turned Around and Walked Right Out Again," by Edwin Belk, and "I'm Not a Fool," by Miss Gladys Arnold, won instant fa-wishes of Mrs. Sartoris, who is an invalid. Gen. Frederick D. Grant was out of town and could not attend in time for the wedding. He wired his best wishes.

Mrs. and Miss Sartoris returned from Europe on Sunday on the Hamburg-American Line steamship Blucher. They have been absent since early last spring, spending most of the time in England. Mrs. Sartoris' former home, Miss Sartoris and Mr. Woolston had been engaged for the last ten months. He is an Englishman, and his real name is not known. He is an architect and engineer of the firm of Carter & Hastings, architects.

Mr. and Mrs. Woolston left the city immediately after the wedding and will spend the winter in Florida.

"Mam'selle Sallie" Pleases a Large Audience at the National.

"Mam'selle Sallie," a musical comedy with music by Raymond Hubbell, and book by Robert B. Smith, was given its first Washington production at the National Theater last night, before a large audience. The piece follows rather closely the usual track of modern musical shows. Mr. Hubbell's music is light and at times distinctly catchy. The lines, while not scintillating with wit, are adequate, as most of the comedy depends for its strength on the personality of the dispensers and the exercise of the gift of happy interpolation. The strongest point of the production lies in its spectacular features. In this respect it is excellent. None of the latest-day productions have shown more pictures which appeal to the eye. As for plot, very little is sufficient. There is something about a couple of lockets of ancient Greek design, which couple the lovers with a fortune in Thessaly. This gives excuse for elaborate scenic effects on the shores of the Mediterranean.

Two diminutive comedy purveyors, John Slavin and Katie Barry, appear as the leading figures in the cast. Mr. Slavin has the rare power of creating fun by simply injecting his personality into the scene, his eccentricities of speech, manner, and facial expression all contributing toward his success.

Last night his most emphatic hits were in "I'm a Lawyer," and a travesty on "Home Sweet Home," the latter comedy with Miss Barry. The latter, cast in the title role, "a French hair dresser with Hibernian proclivities," acts efficiently as side partner to Mr. Slavin and finds plenty of opportunity to display her amusing qualities as a droll character. The song hit of the play was scored by William P. Carleton in "Her Portrait," which he rendered with much feeling and vocal power. His due to Miss Barry, "I'm a Lawyer," "I'm a Lawyer," was also warmly appreciated. Another strong feature was "Whistle When You Walk Out," by Mr. George E. Mack and chorus.

The rendering of snatches from famous operas by the chorus, interspersed with topical verses by the principals, was a real novelty. The "Butterfly" dance by the dancing contingent was also very pleasing as regards both spectacular effect and unique musical accompaniment.

The principals are supported by a strong chorus, and the two scenes are elaborately set, showing the grounds of Mrs. Woodbury's Academy and the mountains of Thessaly. The costumes are varied and rich.

Raymond Hitchcock Scores a Success in "The Gallipoli."

Raymond Hitchcock, in "The Gallipoli," a play by Richard Harding Davis, attracted to the Columbia Theater last night an audience in size and appreciation of the play, which might be expected of such a combination of authorship and acting. The actor has, so long been associated with musical comedy that this essay into straight comedy was looked forward to with some curiosity, much confidence, and many well wishes. It is safe to say that no one was other than perfectly satisfied with the venture.

The Brothers Byrne Make Things Very Lively at the Academy.

A rough and tumble conglomeration of acrobatic farce, pantomime, and general horse play, though rather say on wit, kept the audience roaring at the Academy last night, when the Brothers Byrne again offered their old but seemingly lasting vehicle, "Eight Belles." This is perhaps the only surviving organization of the kind, as the Hanlon Brothers, who were first and foremost in the race for a long time, have either retired or surrendered the honors to the Brothers Byrne. The performance last night was lively, to say the least. The specialists, sprinkled throughout the evening, were pleasing, especially those rendered by Ferguson and Passmore, two clever dancers and travesty artists. Shrook and Rice, in novel bicycle tricks, won applause. The action invariably rests upon the John Byrne Troupe of Acrobats, who are before the audience almost continuously, and their feats were well received.

American Burlesquers Warmly Welcomed Back to the Lyceum.
The Americans, a favorite burlesque troupe with Lyceum audiences, made its appearance in this city yesterday, and by the applause showered upon the principals it seems to have lost none of its old-time popularity. The olio embraced specialties by Melville and Roller, the Break-away Barrows, Jolly Zee, Marie Stuart David, and Clara Figueira and Bergman. A nonsensical farce, "Mixed Pickles," in two parts, introduced a comedy chorus.

CHANCE TO SEE WASHINGTON.
Jobbers and Shippers Plan Excursions from Out of Town.

In accordance with the resolution passed at the meeting of the Jobbers and Shippers' Association last Friday night, President Bell will soon name a committee of five retail merchants of the city to act as a special board of the association to look after retail trade.

One of the plans of the board, when appointed, will be to make arrangements for a big excursion to the city from Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland, and Southern Pennsylvania the week that Congress opens. It is likely that excursions trains will be run over all the railroads leading into Washington. The tickets, according to present plans, will be good for five or six days.

Special arrangements will be made to entertain the visitors while here, and an effort will be put forth to have them feel at home.

The business men of the city are impressed with the idea that a special excursion at the opening of Congress will invite a large following from the Southern country to buy goods and to see the national landmarks, begin the winter's work. There will be besides the public buildings to see, and a thousand and one attractions for which the city is famous. At that time of the year also the local stores are at their best, being full of Christmas goods and attractive bargains of every description.

The local merchants expect to outdo everything undertaken in this part of the country on this occasion in their efforts to impress the people of the neighboring States with the fact that Washington is the best place to obtain their winter supplies.

The work of looking up spots for the Jamestown Exposition is going on at the rooms of the Jobbers and Shippers' Association in the Munsey Building. Yesterday about 1,000 feet of space was contracted by Washington merchants and manufacturers.

ORANGES IN OLD KENTUCKY.

Efforts Now Being Made to Extend Fruit's Present Zone.

Dr. Willet M. Hays, Assistant Secretary of the Department of Agriculture, was asked yesterday about the report that experiments had been tried by his department to graft an orange upon a plum tree or other hardy annual, for the purpose of producing a fruit which might be raised as far north as Kentucky.

"That is a misstatement," he replied. "It is overrated. Experiments are now being made with a view of extending the northern zone of the orange, but not by grafting onto any other tree. A hybrid has been produced of hardy stock which, we believe, will eventually be raised much farther north than any of the fruit now grown. Some of those produced are sweet and edible, while some of the others are fit for use only in the making of 'orangeade,' or for flavoring extracts."

"Do you think," Dr. Hays was asked, "that the zone of the orange may be extended as far north as Kentucky?"

"It is quite possible," he replied. "You know that Kentucky is famous for its peach industry. For instance, they produced one down there composed of plum and orange and called it a 'mint julep,' and with a hearty laugh the Assistant Secretary turned to a mass of correspondence awaiting his signature."

"You may say," he added a moment later, "that experiments in plant culture are going on in many localities and through many agencies—some at the various State experimental stations, some by private individuals. In fact, it was due to the activity along these lines, of recent years, that the American Breeders' Association was formed four years ago—the association, you know, which has expressed a desire to obtain information from the Eugenic Association, which has been investigating the possibilities of improving the human breed."

MUSIC, Not Noise

Is the distinguishing characteristic of the new model, metal action "Cecilian" Piano Player. "Music" depends in great measure on delicacy of touch. A sweet, sympathetic tone quality is always preferred to harsh unmusical sounds. The

The perfect piano player, has this, and is capable of exquisite tone shading.

"The 'Cecilian' positively will not injure your piano. Its new metal action is proof against atmospheric changes, which cannot be said of a wooden action.
